The dawn of 21st century bring new vision and need for developed nations to think on commercial market economy terms, to earn profit even through the space expeditions. (Adam Mann, “Who’s in Charge of Outer Space?” The Wall Street Journal, 19 May 2017). The U.S. has adopted the latter interpretation of the treaty, along with Luxembourg, which hopes to become a hub of space commerce, and the United Arab Emirates, which is currently completing its own domestic space laws to allow asteroid mining. If many countries take a similar stance, this reading could become customary international law. All eyes are now on China, which took a more equivocal stance during the U.N. meeting in March 2017, saying that space-faring nations “should strike a balance between the freedom of utilization and the equitable sharing of benefits.” At the conclusion of the meeting, the U.N. committee elected to hold off on any decisions and revisit the issue in 2018.

Activities in space falls under the purview of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies. This international agreement, also known as the Outer Space Treaty, turned 50 years old in January. More than 100 countries, including the U.S., Russia and China, are parties to the treaty. “It’s the Constitution and the Magna Carta of space law,” says Sagi Kfir, General Counsel for Deep Space Industries, an asteroid-mining company based in Mountain View, Calif. “It’s so fundamental that its principles have become customary international law even for those countries that aren’t signatories.” In February 2017, Virgin Galactic’s Space Ship Two passed its third glide-flight test, putting it on pace to offer suborbital space tourism by the end of 2018. In March 2017, Goldman Sachs announced to investors that a single asteroid containing $25 billion to $50 billion of platinum could be mined by a spacecraft costing only $2.6 billion—less than a third of what has been invested in Uber.

The commercial exploitation of celestial bodies are now accepted by domestic law in USA by the President Obama. One of the biggest modern-day sticking points stems from Article VI, which states that nongovernmental entities—i.e. private businesses—must receive authorization and continuing supervision from their country of origin. Article VI was originally a compromise between the communist Soviets, who wanted to ban off-planet commercial activity, and the Americans, who insisted that space be open for businesses. Whether India will play a crucial role in this treaty formulation so that Chandrayaan II will be part of our effort of proving the ancient knowledge of India used and justified of “Make in India”?

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

Morocco rejoins the African Union after 33 years

On 30 January 2017, Morocco was admitted to the African Union (AU) after previously withdrawing more than three decades ago, from the Organization of African Unity (OAU its predecessor). Morocco became the 55th Member State of the AU, a decision adopted by “consensus”. Morocco left its predecessor, the OAU, in 1984 after the OAU recognised the independence of Moroccan-occupied Western Sahara. Nevertheless, as many as 15 Member States, inter alia, South Africa and Algeria, initially stressed their disapproval of Morocco’s bid. These States were concerned with the simultaneous debate on the question of the Western Sahara and the status of the Sahrawi Arab Democratic Republic (SADR) in the AU. After an emotional and tense debate, member states decided by consensus to leave the question of the disputed territory of Western Sahara for another day, and resolve it with Morocco “back in the family”.

In large parts of eastern Ukraine, that context is characterized by periods of extensive fighting which has claimed a large number of lives. The destruction, on 17 July 2014, of Malaysia Airlines Flight MH17 while it was flying over Ukrainian territory en route between Amsterdam and Kuala Lumpur, caused the deaths of 298 people.

On 16 January 2017, Ukraine submitted the lawsuit against Russia at the ICJ alleging the violations of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism (Terrorism Financing Convention) and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD). With respect to the violations of the Terrorism Financing Convention, Ukraine alleged that since 2014 Russia has escalated its interference in Ukrainian domestic affairs by “intervening militarily in Ukraine, financing acts of terrorism, and violating the human rights of millions of Ukraine’s citizens”. Ukraine submitted that by instigating and sustaining an armed insurrection in eastern Ukraine, Russia violated fundamental principles of international law enshrined in the Convention. Ukraine respectfully requests the Court to adjudge and declare that the Russian Federation bears international responsibility, by virtue of its sponsorship of terrorism and failure to prevent the financing of terrorism under the Convention, for the acts of terrorism committed by its proxies in Ukraine, including: (a) the shoot-down of Malaysian Airlines Flight MH17; (b) the shelling of civilians, including in Volnovakha, Mariupol, and Kramatorsk; and (c) the bombing of civilians, including in Kharkiv.

As Russia does not recognize the compulsory jurisdiction of the ICJ, the only avenue for bringing the action before the ICJ is to rely upon a treaty that provides for the possibility of judicial settlement in the ICJ and has been ratified by both parties. Given that both Ukraine and Russia are parties to the Terrorism Financing Convention and CERD, Ukraine invoked those two instruments as the basis for its action before the ICJ. As to Ukraine’s claims on the violation of CERD, Russia maintained that it engaged in the dialogue with Ukraine in good faith, however, Ukraine “showed the lack of interest in the substantive discussion of the issues at dispute”. Russia submits that it suggested Ukraine to compare Russian and Ukrainian legislation on racial discrimination “in order to find a common under-standing of the best way to protect the people’s rights and substantively deal with each specific situation”.

At the public hearings held from 6 to 9 March 2017, oral observations on the Request for the indication of provisional measures were presented. At the end of its second round of oral observations, Ukraine asked the Court to indicate the following provisional measures: “With respect to the Terrorism Financing Convention, Ukraine requests that the Court order the following provisional measures: (a) the Russian Federation shall refrain from any action which might aggravate or extend the dispute under the Terrorism Financing Convention before the Court or make this dispute more difficult to resolve. (b) the Russian Federation shall exercise appropriate control over its border to prevent further acts of terrorism financing, including the supply of weapons from the territory of the Russian Federation to the territory of Ukraine. (c) the Russian Federation shall halt and prevent all transfers from the territory of the Russian Federation of money, weapons, vehicles, equipment, training, or personnel to groups that have engaged in acts of terrorism against civilians in Ukraine, or that the Russian Federation knows may in the future engage in acts of terrorism against civilians in Ukraine, including but not limited to the ‘Donetsk People’s Republic’, the ‘Luhansk People’s Republic’, the ‘Kharkiv Partisans’, and associated groups and individuals. (d) the Russian Federation shall take all measures at its disposal to ensure that any groups operating in Ukraine that have previously received transfers from the territory of the Russian Federation of to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS). Under Article 76, paragraph 8, of UNCLOS, a State party to the Convention intending to establish the outer limits of its continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles shall submit information on such limits to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (CLCS). The role of the CLCS is to make recommendations to coastal States on matters related to the establishment of the outer limits of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles. With regard to disputed maritime areas, the CLCS requires the prior consent of all the States concerned before it will consider submissions regarding such areas. On 7 April 2009, the Parties signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), agreeing to grant to each other no-objection in respect of submissions made to the CLCS on the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles. Paragraph 6 of the MOU further provides that: “The delimitation of maritime boundaries in the areas under dispute . . . shall be agreed between the two coastal States . . . after the Commission has concluded its examination of the separate submissions made by each of the two coastal States and made its recommendations . . . .” In the following years, both Parties raised and withdrew objections to the consideration of each other’s submissions by the CLCS. Those submissions are now under consideration.

On 28 August 2014, Somalia instituted proceedings against Kenya before the Court, requesting the latter to determine, on the basis of international law, the complete course of the single maritime boundary dividing all the maritime areas appertaining to Somalia and to Kenya in the Indian Ocean, including the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles. As basis for the Court’s jurisdiction, Somalia invoked the declarations recognizing the Court’s jurisdiction as compulsory made by the two States. Kenya, however, raised two preliminary objections: one concerning the jurisdiction of the Court, the other the admissibility of the Application. In its first preliminary objection, Kenya argued that the Court lacked jurisdiction to entertain the present case as a result of one of the reservations to its declaration accepting the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, which excludes disputes in regard to which the parties have agreed “to have recourse to some other method or methods of settlement”. It asserted that the MOU constitutes an agreement to have recourse to another method of settlement. It added that the relevant provisions of UNCLOS on dispute settlement also amount to an agreement on the method of settlement. The Court first considered whether the MOU falls within the scope of Kenya’s reservation. Having examined the legal status of that instrument under international law, it concluded that it is a valid treaty which entered into force upon signature and which is binding on the Parties under international law. The Court then proceeds to interpret the MOU. The Court again by observing that the object and purpose of the MOU was to constitute a no-objection agreement, enabling the CLCS to make recommendations notwithstanding the existence of a dispute between the Parties regarding the delimitation of the continental shelf. It then examined paragraph 6 of the MOU, in order to establish whether it contains an agreed dispute settlement method. The Court noted that the provision in question relates solely to the continental shelf, and not to the whole maritime boundary between the Parties, which suggests that it did not create a dispute settlement procedure for the determination of that boundary. It also observed that the text of the sixth paragraph reflects that of Article 83, paragraph 1, of UNCLOS, suggesting that the Parties intended to acknowledge the usual course that delimitation would take under that Article, namely engaging in negotiations with a view of reaching agreement, and not to prescribe a method of dispute settlement. It further pointed out that the Parties accept that the sixth paragraph did not prevent them from undertaking such negotiations, or reaching certain agreements, prior to obtaining the recommendations of the CLCS. Finally, it noted that the MOU repeatedly makes clear that the process leading to the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles is to be without prejudice to the delimitation of the maritime boundary between the Parties, implying that delimitation could be undertaken independently of a recommendation of the CLCS. The Court concluded from the foregoing that the MOU does not constitute an agreement by the Parties “to have recourse to some other method or methods of settlement”. Therefore, it does not fall within the scope of Kenya’s reservation to its declaration recognizing the Court’s jurisdiction.

The Court next considered whether Part XV of UNCLOS (entitled “Settlement of disputes”) amounts to an agreement on a method of settlement for the maritime boundary dispute within the meaning of Kenya’s reservation. It focused on Article 282 of the Convention in particular, which, while making no express reference to an agreement to the Court’s jurisdiction resulting from optional clause declarations, nevertheless provides that an agreement to submit a dispute to a specified procedure that applies in lieu of the procedures provided for in Section 2 of Part XV may not only be contained in a “general, regional or bilateral agreement”, but may also be reached “otherwise”. The Court is of the view that the phrase “or otherwise” in Article 282 encompasses agreement to the jurisdiction of the Court resulting from optional clause declarations. It concluded from this that under Article 282, the optional clause declarations of the Parties constitute an agreement, reached “otherwise”, to settle in the Court disputes.
concerning the interpretation or application of UNCLOS, and that the procedure before the Court shall thus apply “in lieu” of procedures provided for in Section 2 of Part XV. Accordingly, this dispute does not, by virtue of Part XV of UNCLOS, fall outside the scope of Kenya’s optional clause declaration. The Court recalled that, according to Kenya, the Application is inadmissible for two reasons. First, Kenya argues that the Parties had agreed in the MOU to delimit their boundary by negotiation only after the completion of the CLCS review of their submissions. Having previously found that the MOU did not contain such an agreement, the Court also rejected this aspect of Kenya’s second preliminary objection. Second, Kenya contends that Somalia’s withdrawal of its consent to the consideration by the CLCS of Kenya’s submission was in breach of the MOU. The Court is of the view that the violation by Somalia of a treaty at issue in the case does not per se affect the admissibility of its Application. In light of the foregoing, the Court finds that the preliminary objection to the admissibility of Somalia’s Application must be rejected. By an Order dated 2 February 2017, the International Court of Justice (ICJ), has fixed 18 December 2017 as the time-limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of the Republic of Kenya in the case concerning Maritime Delimitation in the Indian Ocean (Somalia v. Kenya).

UN Votes to Outlaw Nuclear Weapons in 2017: Taking forward Multilateral Nuclear Disarmament Negotiations

On 23 December 2016, the UN General Assembly adopted a resolution to convene negotiations in 2017 on a treaty prohibiting nuclear weapons. The voting result was 113 nations in favour and 35 against, with 13 abstentions. Earlier, the First Committee of the General Assembly, which deals with disarmament and international security matters, had adopted a draft of the same resolution. Austria, Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Indonesia, Ireland, Jamaica, Kenya, Liechtenstein, Malawi, Malta, Mexico, Namibia, Nauru, New Zealand, Nigeria, Palau, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Samoa, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Thailand, Uruguay, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) and Zambia moved this resolution. The voting result in the First Committee was 123 nations in favour and 38 against, with 16 abstentions. India abstained from voting and appended a statement delivered by Ambassador D.B. Venkatesh Varma, Permanent Representative of India to the CD. Disarmament is a Charter responsibility of the UNGA. In exercise of this responsibility the First Special Session on Disarmament of the UNGA established the disarmament machinery with the CD as the single multilateral disarmament negotiation forum. Nuclear disarmament continues to be on the CD’s agenda. We are not convinced that the proposed Conference in 2017 convened under GA rules of procedure can address the longstanding expectation of the international community for a comprehensive instrument on nuclear disarmament. Further, India did not participate in the OEWG which met in Geneva during 2016 and hence reserves its position on its Report and the recommendations therein. India has supported the commencement of negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on a Comprehensive Nuclear Weapons Convention, which in addition to prohibition and elimination also includes verification. International verification would be essential to the global elimination of nuclear weapons, just as it has been in the case of the Chemical Weapons Convention. Progress on nuclear disarmament in the CD should remain an international priority.

UN General Assembly First Committee Sends 69 Texts to General Assembly, Concluding Session by Approving Drafts on Chemical Weapons, Improvised Explosive Devices

The First Committee (Disarmament and International Security) concluded its work today, sending 69 draft resolutions and decisions to the General Assembly for adoption. The Committee approved two draft resolutions on chemical weapons and improvised explosive devices.

By a vote of 149 in favour to 6 against (Burundi, China, Iran, Kyrgyzstan, Russian Federation, Syria) with 15 abstentions, it approved a draft titled “implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction” (document A/C.1/71/L.61/Rev.1). By its terms, the General Assembly would condemn in the strongest possible terms the use of chemical weapons by anyone under any circumstances, emphasizing that any use of chemical weapons anywhere, at any time, by anyone, under any circumstances was unacceptable as well as a violation of international law. The world body would also express its strong conviction that those individuals responsible for the use of chemical weapons must and should be held accountable.

Prior to approving that draft as a whole, the Committee approved the retention of preambular paragraphs 3 and 4 and operative paragraphs 2 and 13, which detailed, among other things, findings of reports of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW)-United Nations Joint Investigative Mechanism on chemical weapon use in Syria by the Syrian Arab Armed Forces and Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL/Da‘esh).

The representative of Poland introduced a draft resolution titled “implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction” (document...
RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

A/C.1/71/L.61/Rev.1). As sole sponsor of the draft resolution, Poland had been presenting it to the Committee every year. For years, the draft had contributed to international peace and security and had enhanced the chemical non-proliferation regime that was based on the Convention. The resolution reflected the ongoing work on cases of use of chemical weapons in Syria by the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW)-United Nations Joint Investigative Mechanism. The draft could not turn a blind eye to those developments as they undermined the fundamental international norm against the use of chemical weapons, the bedrock of the Convention. The representative of India said his delegation had voted in favour of “L.61/Rev.1”, given the importance it attached to the Chemical Weapons Convention. India regretted to note that consensus had not been achieved for the second year in a row. Moreover, India was deeply concerned by reports of the use of chemical weapons by terrorist groups, including in Syria. However, Indian delegation had abstained from the vote to retain operative paragraph 3, as the third Joint Investigative Mechanism report was still under consideration by the Security Council.

Without a vote, the Committee also approved a draft resolution titled “countering the threat posed by improvised explosive devices” (document A/C.1/71/L.68/Rev.1), by which terms the General Assembly would strongly encourage States to develop and adopt their own national policy to counter improvised explosive devices so as to strengthen their countermeasure capability to combat illegal armed groups, terrorists and other unauthorized recipients in their use of improvised explosive devices. Also by the text, the Assembly would stress the need for States to take appropriate measures to strengthen the management of their national ammunition stockpiles and encourage the application of the International Ammunition Technical Guidelines for the safer and more secure management of ammunition stockpiles.

Russia and China Veto Another UN Security Council Resolution Seeking to Impose Sanctions on Syria

Russia and China exercised their veto powers on 27 February 2017 in the United Nations Security Council to block a resolution that would have imposed sanctions against specific parties using chemical weapons in war-torn Syria. WTO Trade Facilitation Agreement Takes Effect

On 22 February 2017, WTO Trade Facilitation Agreement (TFA) was entered into force. In receiving four more ratifications from Rwanda, Oman, Chad and Jordan for the Trade Facilitation Agreement (TFA), the WTO has obtained the two-third acceptance of the agreement from its 164 members needed to bring the TFA into force. The total number of ratifications reached over the required threshold of 110. The entry into force of this agreement, which seeks to expedite the movement, release and clearance of goods across borders, launches a new phase for trade facilitation reforms all over the world and creates a significant boost for commerce and the multilateral trading system as a whole. Developed countries have committed to immediately implement the Agreement, which sets out a broad series of trade facilitation reforms. Developing countries, in comparison, will immediately apply only the TFA provisions they have designated as “Category A” commitments. For the other provisions of the Agreement, they must indicate as to when these will be implemented and what capacity building support is needed to help them implement these provisions, known as Category B and C commitments. These can be implemented at a later date with least-developed countries given more time to notify these commitments. So far, notifications of Category A commitments have already been provided by 90 WTO members. As of today, the following WTO members have accepted the TFA: Hong Kong China, Singapore, the United States, Mauritius, Malaysia, Japan, Australia, Botswana, Trinidad and Tobago, the Republic of Korea, Nicaragua, Niger, Belize, Switzerland, Chinese Taipei, China, Liechtenstein, Lao PDR, New Zealand, Togo, Thailand, the European Union (on behalf of its 28 member states), the former Yugoslavia Republic of Macedonia, Pakistan, Panama, Guyana, Côte d’Ivoire, Grenada, Saint Lucia, Kenya, Myanmar, Norway, Viet Nam, Brunei Darussalam, Ukraine, Zambia, Lesotho, Georgia, Seychelles, Jamaica, Mali, Cambodia, Paraguay, Turkey, Brazil, Macao China, the United Arab Emirates, Samoa, India, the Russian Federation, Montenegro, Albania, Kazakhstan, Sri Lanka, St. Kitts and Nevis, Madagascar, the Republic of Moldova, El Salvador, Honduras, Mexico, Peru, Saudi Arabia, Afghanistan, Senegal, Uruguay, Bahrain, Bangladesh, the Philippines, Iceland, Chile, Swaziland, Dominica, Mongolia, Gabon, the Kyrgyz Republic, Canada, Ghana, Mozambique, Saint Vincent & the Grenadines, Nigeria, Nepal, Rwanda, Oman, Chad and Jordan.

US President’s Executive Order Excluding Refugees and Nationals from Seven Muslim Countries

On 27 January 2017, U.S. President Donald Trump signed an executive order banning refugees and nationals from seven Muslim countries. Brief purpose of the executive order is: The visa-issuance process plays a crucial role in detecting individuals with terrorist ties and stopping them from entering the United States. Perhaps in no instance was that more apparent than the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, when State Department policy prevented consular officers from properly scrutinizing the visa applications of several of the 19 foreign nationals who went on to murder nearly 3,000 Americans. And while the visa-issuance process was reviewed and amended after the September 11 attacks to better detect would-be terrorists from receiving visas, these measures did not stop attacks by foreign nationals who were admitted to the United States. Numerous foreign-born individuals have been convicted or implicated in terrorism-related crimes since September 11, 2001, including foreign nationals who entered the United States after receiving visitor, student, or employment visas, or who entered through the United States refugee resettlement program. Deteriorating conditions in certain countries due to war, strife, disaster, and civil unrest increase the likelihood that terrorists will use any means possible to enter the United States. The United States must be vigilant during the visa-issuance process to ensure that those approved for admission do not intend to harm Americans and that they have no ties to terrorism. In order to protect Americans, the United States must ensure that those admitted to this country do not bear hostile attitudes towards it and its founding principles. The United States cannot, and should not, admit those who do not support the Constitution, or those who place violent ideologies over American law. In addition, the United States should not admit those who engage in acts of bigotry or hatred (including “honor” killings, other forms of violence against women, or the persecution of those who practice religions different from their own) or those who would oppress Americans of any race, gender, or sexual orientation. The exclusion order does nothing to increase the safety of the United States. It instead will become a recruiting tool for ISIL/ISIS and endanger the safety of U.S. citizens abroad. Trump’s proposal to impose “extreme vetting” was not itself vetted.
